NEW YORK DOCTOR DISCOVERS A DRAMATIC NEW BREAKTHROUGH TO CURE OVERWEIGHT.
10,000 PATIENTS LOSE POUNDS AND INCHES QUICKLY AND SAFELY WITH NEVER BEING HUNGRY.

'Lost 85 bs. of ugly fat in only 2 short months!'

YES, THIS IS MY ASTONISHING STORY OF HOW I LOST 85 POUNDS OF EXTRA WEIGHT IN ONLY 60 DAYS
... NO DIETS ... NO CALORIE COUNTING ... NEVER HUNGRY AND COMPLETELY SAFE.

In the summer of 1967 I noticed a report written by a New York Doctor who was specializing in Internal Medicine. The doctor wrote that he had helped 10,000 overweight men and women in less all the weight they desired. These people included Doctors, Nurses, Dieticians, Life Insurance Experts, Actors, Models, and others who had Never Been Able to Reduce Successfully No Matter How Hard They Tried. Yes, these people were permitted to eat many meals as they wanted — No calories to count. They ate as much or more than ever ... Were never hungry and TO EVERYONE'S AMAZEMENT SAW POUNDS MELT AWAY WITH UNBELIEVABLE SPEED IN THE FIRST 3 DAYS OF FOLLOWING THIS METHOD. Some people actually LOST 25 POUNDS THE FIRST WEEK. After carefully examining the medical report, I decided to give this Doctor's Method a try.

I STARTED TO FOLLOW THIS DOCTOR'S SENSATIONAL PLAN AND TO MY UTTER AMAZEMENT I LOST MORE WEIGHT IN THE FIRST 3 DAYS THAN IF I HARDLY EATEN ANYTHING AT ALL. After seeing such amazing results in ONLY 3 DAYS I continued on — NEVER HUNGRY EVEN ONCE — to lose a total of 85 pounds in only 2 SHORT MONTHS. Never once did I suffer any ill effects from this quick and Dramatic Weight Loss. I had tried many times before to starve myself to lose weight but with this method — with no calories to count and with the big weight loss the very first week gave me the confidence I needed to continue on. Now I can Lose Weight as quickly as I desire and so can you. YES! The more I ate to satisfy my body the more weight I would lose. Now even though I love to eat I have no problem to keep my weight down to what it should be. I urge every overweight man or woman to start my method immediately for these extra pounds and inches are impairing your appearance, your health and endangering and shortening your life span. OBESITY IS THE NUMBER 1 HEALTH HAZARD IN AMERICA TODAY!! YES, THOSE EXTRA POUNDS WILL KILL YOU ... SLOWER FOR SOME ... QUICKER FOR OTHERS.

SCOREBOARD

WHAT'S THE AVERAGE?

The average family in the United States moves every four years, according to the National Association of Real Estate Boards. . . . About seventy buttons a year are required by the average American. . . . Shaving and getting haircuts occupy thirty-four hundred hours of the average American male's life.

. . . The average American holds twelve regular, full-time jobs in his lifetime. . . . An average of seven babies are born each minute in the United States. . . . The average American office-worker spends the equivalent of almost two full work weeks a year taking coffee breaks. . . . The average ant can crawl twelve feet a minute on a fast track.

• NAGS AND WAGS

A woman sued for divorce after her husband pawned her wedding ring to bet on the horses, then gave the redeemed ring back to her as a Christmas present. . . . A court dismissed a speeding charge after the defendant explained he had been rushing to a nearby race track to comfort his horse during a hurricane alert. . . . Because she "felt sorry" for a poor, skinny little horse that didn't have a chance, a woman put $100 on its nose. She collected $14,070 when the long shot romped home first. . . . After judges at a jumping contest in Holland, had disqualified all entrants because of their poor showing, the local veterinarian bet them he could outdo the horses. He went the whole distance under his own power, winning the wager.

• OVERTURNED EVIDENCE

Just about every peace officer in the county was on hand for a hearing on a drunk driving case. A visitor, obviously a bit shaky from drinking, staggered into the court room, headed straight for the table where the state's evidence was sitting; and made a grab for it. The assistant district attorney cried, "Arrest that man," someone did, and the visitor was hauled off to the pokey. The evidence? A case of beer.

• ODD ITEMS . . .

Wonder if any other big city has a trout stream right in the middle of town, open to local fly fishermen? Philadelphia does. . . . A local bartender contends that Grand Marnier, if sipped slowly, is excellent medication for a sore throat! . . . Tip to cigar smokers: don't flick the ashes off your cigar. A half inch of ash makes for cooler smoking.

• HANDYMAN

Coat the edges of doors and areas around doorknobs with paste wax and the inevitable finger marks will be easier to remove. . . . An inexpensive plastic ice-cube tray is an ideal gadget for the workshop—for storing nuts, bolts, screws, and nails. . . . If you dip nails and screws in nail polish before using, they'll hold better and resist rust. . . . Remove your wrist watch when working with paint remover. It may pit a plastic crystal. . . . To retard tarnish on silver jewelry, give it a coating of colorless nail polish.

• EXPERTS?

After a burglar stole $49.12 from the office of a Florida insurance company that specializes in burglary insurance, officials ruefully revealed that the loss was not insured. . . . A woman who was robbed of $400 by six gypsies to whom she had generously given a free meal, told police that she felt like abandoning her profession: character analysis. . . . A clerk in the Police Automobile Theft Bureau telephoned his superior to say he would be late for work because somebody had stolen his car. . . . A man who is in charge of local mosquito control finally discovered why mosquitoes were so abundant in his home. They were breeding in his air-cooler. . . . Two drivers were quite embarrassed when their cars collided. Both were driving instructors.

• SKELETONS

A University is going to one of its closets for skeletons. They are the remnants of agile, sharp toothed lizard-like reptiles that lived on the edge of an evergreen forest 230,000,000 years ago and stalked cockroaches and scorpions beside a placid lagoon in what is now Kansas. The cockroaches and scorpions have survived to our day, but the reptiles have not. All that remain are fragile fossils embedded in shale kept in cotton-lined cases. Until very recently, not much was known about the lizard-like reptiles. They were among the first animals to adapt themselves to dry land.

• THIS IS YOUR WIFE

After having advertised in the local paper for a week for "the name of the party" who stole his "wife and groceries" from his home, a man ran another notice to correct a misunderstanding: "I only want reimbursement for the $22 worth of groceries. . . . The man that stole the wife can keep her."

● SYPHILIS, ONLY recently considered ■ be a disappearing disease, has now been found to be increasing during the past few years. Yet despite the latest increase, the incidence of reported cases is down 82 per cent from its peak in 1943, when penicillin therapy was first introduced. When the effectiveness of penicillin for syphilis was originally demonstrated, a few optimistic Public Health officials thought the dread disease would be under complete control within a few years, but they were reckoning without human nature. As cases of syphilis dramatically dropped, people stopped thinking about it, stopped taking precautions against it, and as a result, the rate has started to climb again.

Most distressing part about this recurrence ■ that the major rise in the venereal disease rate is among the young. Americans under 20 report one new case every 11 minutes. For the statistically minded, more than half of the reported venereal infections were among teen-agers and young adults, although this age group makes up only 13 per cent of the population. Gonorrhea, incidentally, which had its peak year in 1947, has shown a less dramatic drop in cases than syphilis—54% as against the 82% mentioned above—but its rate has continued to go down.

Current reports would seem to indicate that venereal disease ■ much more common among men than among women. The incidence of syphilis was 30 per cent higher for men, for gonorrhea, the figure was a whopping 140 per cent. But like all figures, these may be somewhat misleading; signs of venereal disease being more obvious in men.

▲ NEW ANTIBIOTIC, kanamycin, has been found Bristol Laboratories in Syracuse reported that the drug is highly effective against organisms (like staphylococci) which require air to live.

The report states that the drug blocks the process by which the germ cells oxidize food chemicals to obtain energy. When this energy supply ■ reduced, the cell wall becomes fragile, and the cell itself is ultimately destroyed. This ■ of special interest to medical scientists, because the new antibiotic is a "bacteriocidal" drug—that is, it actually kills the bacteria. Most of the so-called antibiotics now in general use, do their dirty work on germs by preventing the disease cells from multiplying.

INSULIN was recently used as a murder weapon by a man in England. The drug, which literally has been a life-saver to millions of diabetics throughout the world, was used by a trained nurse (male) to kill his thirty-year-old wife. The woman was found dead in her bath, apparently a victim of drowning. But a post-mortem examination showed that the woman had been unconscious prior to entering the tub. The discovery of injection marks led to a search in the tissue underlying the perforations. A comparatively large quantity of unabsorbed insulin was discovered, believed to be only a small fraction of the amount that had been injected.

The husband tried to explain away the injection marks by saying that he had been giving his wife a substance for two weeks in an attempt to induce an abortion. But the post-mortem did not uncover any trace of the substance he mentioned, nor were symptoms of a pregnancy evident.

A person less familiar with the use of drugs probably would not have thought of such a method of killing, nor would the materials have been so readily available. A person with greater knowledge of drugs, however, would have realized that a post-mortem examination would reveal discrepancies. Incidentally, this is believed to be the first time a charge of murder by insulin poisoning has been substantiated.

INSULIN, as a specific for diabetes, may be on its way out, to be replaced by drugs that can be administered by mouth. At a recent meeting of diabetes experts, the use of pills as an aid for diabetes was a main topic of discussion. So far, the pills that have already been developed do not change the diabetic's way of life—he is merely less dependent on constant, regular hypodermic injections. Some experts, however, do not approve of the pills developed so far, primarily because they fear that the new drugs will cause dangerous or damaging side effects. A large number of diabetics have switched to pills, which are easier to take, but these patients are usually advised by their physicians not to go too long without stopping by for ■ checkup. Most patients will continue to need occasional shots.

"PARROT FEVER" soon may be a dead issue as a threat to bird-lovers. Every year some 300 (out of perhaps 10,000,000) owners of parrots and parakeets in the U.S. come down with psittacosis, or parrot fever. This disease used to be practically untreatable, but with the discovery of antibiotics, its usually fatal results became rare. Now, a virus expert has discovered a method to keep parakeets free of psittacosis—he injected them regularly with Aureomycin. This worked, but in practice ■ would be too costly and difficult for most bird owners. Backed by funds from a bird-food concern, he has now found a way to put the antibiotic into the bird's food and hopes to put the treated food on the market. If successful, it will end man's fear of contracting a disease from a sick bird—by the best process of all—keeping the bird itself healthy.

A NEW and drastic method for the relief of pain is currently under experimental investigation. It promises to be useful for chronic forms of severe pain. In such extreme cases, surgeons have sometimes gone so far as to cut the white nerve bundles in the front part of the brain. This has the effect of making an otherwise unbearable pain tolerable, but at the same time it often results in a dulling of the patient's personality. Now a new technique has been developed whereby a small electrode is implanted in the thalamus, near the center of the brain. After the doctors are sure that the location is right, they send a mild current through the electrode, destroying a part of the thalamus, which is a relay point of many nerve impulses. In trials so far, this system has worked most effectively, deadening pain without changing the patient's emotional reactions.

TOM McCahill SAYS:

"The appliance repair field is so uncrowded
it's almost lonely!"

Someone once said that if you build a better mouse-trap, the world will beat a path to your door. In the home appliance business, a lot of enterprising companies have gotten rich peddling a long list of handy electrical gadgets for the home. The trouble is, the dozen or more appliances in the average American home can go on the fritz, and men with the proper training to do repairs are as scarce as knee-length skirts on teen-agers.

Good Appliance Repairmen are a rare breed these days. Those with a little ambition are booked so solidly you can wait days to get somebody to fix a balky refrigerator or cantankerous toaster. Sometimes, you have to settle for a bum job from a guy who had no business calling himself an Appliance Repairman in the first place.

This brings me to my point. If you want to make money in a field that's begging for trained technicians, there's a fine, low-cost home-study plan available that teaches you how to handle every type of Appliance repair in detail — including refrigeration, air conditioners, and even small gas engines. The course was prepared by the instructors at National Radio Institute. This is the oldest and largest home-study school in the Electronics/Electrical fields with more than fifty years' experience training men like yourself for new careers or spare-time or full-time businesses of their own.

A few years ago, NRI recognized the increasing demand for trained Appliance Repairmen. They set about preparing well-illustrated, easy-to-understand lessons that teach you how to repair home, commercial and farm Appliances. NRI even added a professional Appliance Tester that's included in their low tuition. With the Tester and a few basic tools you probably already have, you're equipped to service most Electrical Appliances. If you aren't making $5 to $7 an hour in spare time fixing Appliances for friends and neighbors within a few months after enrolling, my name isn't McCahill.

The reason I'm not doubting Thomas, is because the staff at NRI is composed of experienced instructors who guide you through the course with more personal attention than you'd get in many classrooms. With the kind of help they give a student and the kind of course they have, you can be the man in demand in this field — even if you've never rewired a plug, or got fed up with school at the 9th grade.

The best advice I can give you is to clip the coupon below and send for the NRI Appliance Training Catalog. It's free, and there's no obligation. NRI doesn't employ salesmen, so nobody will be knocking at your door. All it will cost you is a postage stamp. Take it from Uncle Tom, the Appliance Repair field needs good men. Now.

A Fortune In Soft Yellow Gold— Waiting To Be Taken!

I THOUGHT I COULD take anything. But even after eight years living and wandering among some of the world's most savage and uncivilized people, this was too much death in its most excruciating forms—had I meant anything to me—until now. Yet the sign of pretty young Betty Weekers lying there on the ground, her soft, nude body spreadeagled and staked in the dust, her sweet blue eyes staring blindly at the air through eyelids that had been sewn open, while the faint, scultures strutted grandly beside her, idly pecking my and then at her firm flesh, drove me almost out of my mind. She couldn't even scream. The mass of dry, dusted hair stuffed through her open mouth stifled
every sound. She was an hell absolute and inviolate; my hell, and there wasn't one damn thing I could do except stand there and wait for her to die.

Was it worth it? Was anything worth this—even a fortune? A vast and a primary man can hardly grasp the amount: ten million—fifty million! What now? The looted treasure? A robot
—now much is that?

The rumors have been rocking around for nearly a century. The vast treasure—in Mexico hoards, Montezuma. Was that the prize that a million the transpire, interloper had found as no briefly ruled the old land.

Montezuma was dead, murdered, assassinated.
The ruler of Mexico looked; there was no treasure.
That's not nearly what had been expected.
The Austrian found it. Had anyone ever seen what does it matter anyway. The rumors were there. And nothing could do them. A house had searched and locate nothing.

And then, for the first time, an old, black statue of a woman—obviously Indian—and equally obviously old—very old, it wasn't worth much, maybe a hundred dollars—and death brought it for twenty. And then came the day I scurched it—accidentally—and found that underneath the thick coating—maybe half an inch thick—of common metal, the statue was gold—soft, heavy and pure.
It tripped off the ore—and weighed what remained.
Eight pounds, even, or so, once, or gold—$35
an ounce. You might—It made a fair profit.
agreed.

Continued

by MELTON CORBETT

So I did a little chucking, tracing back on the idol. I paid out good cash for information, a lot of cash. The locals thought I was crazy. But in Mexico—as anywhere, money talks and the trail led me rapidly to Yucatan. From there, it disappeared back into wild interior. I had a pretty good idea where to look, but I was stymied.

Sure, the three grand plus for the statue took me quite a while. The few thousand more I had in the bank took me further. But for the kind of trip I was planning on taking, I needed money in great big gobs. That I didn't have.

So I did the next best thing to running things on my own. I took in some partners. They were greedy and brainless. But they did have dough.

Phil Tasker—yellow as a mongrel dog. He'd run if you sneezed in his direction. But he had money and he wanted more.

Myra Weeker—30 years old—widow-loaded with her late husband's dough. Driven by two ambitions—one to make every man she met, all at the same time if possible. Two—to latch on to every loose bit of money that her sticky fingers could touch.

Myra's step-daughter—Patty—19—under the expert tutelage of a "guardian," rapidly turning into a carbon copy—sex itad and money crazy.

A ten day bedroom bout in a mountain villa north of Tampico convinced the dames. A look at the idol convinced Tasker. So, lo and behold, one lovely spring morning saw the four of us—two fellows and two dames—nice and cozy—heading away from the Yucatan coast off on the search for treasure. A backlog of fifty thousand bank-safe dollar bills guaranteed that we'd have the best of everything.

It was not unpleasant in the back country. True my dear, sweet partners complained incessantly—but, what the Hell, anything short of the service at the Ritz would have accomplished that. But we managed, and well. By day, we hacked our way from village to village, attempting to track down the source of my idol. By night, it was light up the sky with one—or both of the charming ladies. They were quite uninhibited. I'm afraid that Tasker didn't approve at all. Not that Tasker ever turned either one of them down. But he would have preferred something a bit more formal.

We'd been away from the centers of civilization for about ten days when we ran across Juan. He was a slimy little SOB. But, in a business like mine you don't usually meet any other kind. Like all of the tribe of adventurers, he seemed to have a special kind of nose for hard cash. He was perfectly willing to take what we had to offer, and to give something in exchange—if I had to.

He isn't a half bad shot. I'm also a hell of a lot bigger than he was.

So, off we marched for another few days, Juan leading the way. At that point we were somewhere in the back of Campeche state, not too far from the Guatemalan border. I'd estimate, though exactly where, I still don't know.

At any rate, we came to this jungle village, Indians, pure and simple, and so far removed from knowledge of the outside world that I doubt if Columbus could have told the difference.

Something was definitely wrong with the set-up. I couldn't put my finger on it, and I doubt if either I or anyone else could have picked out one item of behaviour on the part of the villagers. But it was there. The village headman was just a shade too polite. The people were just a trace too quiet. There were only the slightest bit of whisperings behind our backs. There was nothing substantial. Yet I sensed that something terrible was about to happen.

We were put up in an empty hut. I checked my guns carefully and that night I slept as lightly as a fly. There was nothing.

In the morning, I talked with the headman. He was all smiles. Yes, he knew the story of the idol goddess. Certainly it had come from that village. One of the young boys had found it. Not only was he free with the information, but he announced that he'd be only too happy to show us exactly where it had come from.

I wasn't merely amazed. I was shocked absolutely speechless. I've dealt with Indians and other primitives for better than fifteen years. And NEVER—absolutely NEVER had any of them offered anything at all, unasked. This was crazy. It had every indication of a trap.

But what was I supposed to do? I'd talked three not entirely innocent people into putting up their dough to back his search. Now the answer was being tossed right into our laps. I couldn't say we weren't interested. I couldn't refuse to go and have a look. I couldn't do a damn thing except bubble with suspicion, determine to keep my eyes and ears open—and walk right into the spider's web.

And walk we did. Two of the easiest miles of the entire expedition. Right back into the low hills, with a laughing ten year old as our guide.

THE ENTRANCE to the cave was a low, black serpent's mouth, brooding on an ugly hillside. Slashed boulders, hanging from the roof like vicious teeth, threatened to topple inward at any instant. Under any normal circumstance, I'd have refused to enter the damn place on any account. But now with my three partners, pushing and shoving in order to be the first inside, for all of our sakes, I had to swallow my dread and follow. The boy, still laughing, sat down on the meadow below the cave, preparing to wait for us. He was no fool.

I scrambled over the lip of the cave door. The ground, a jumbled mass of fallen rock, sloped down into the hillside. Picking my way cautiously, I worked my way down into the main cavern room.

It wasn't too bad inside. The doorway let in more than enough light to see clearly. Perhaps a lamp would have been helpful, but it wasn't really absolutely necessary. We could all see well enough to get around—and even to explore.

The others were dashing around, madly, aimlessly, shouting to each other like a bunch of kids. They hadn't found anything at all, at first glance, though from the well trampled look of the earth floor, there had been plenty of activity here in the past—and not so distant past, either. The boy hadn't been the first of that village in the cave by a long shot. That was obvious.

I glanced back at the entrance. There was nothing. I shrugged, pulled out a flashlight and began to look around me.

The huge picture on the wall stopped me in my tracks. How can I describe it? A woman—the original of my idol, no doubt—nude, painted in a brilliant red, some twenty feet in height, was posed with some dozen obviously Indian men Mayan, from their costumes, I'd judge. What they were doing is unprintable. No matter how good your imagination, I doubt if you could conceive this combination.

But one thing did stand out. Looked at from the peculiar perspective of the point immediately below the painting, the bodies of the participants in that hellish orgy formed a mishapen arrow. It pointed at a mass of small, broken rocks, a miniature cairn in corner of the cave.

Curiously, I walked over to the rock pile, and began moving the stones. Five minutes work, and my aimlessness disappeared. There was a cavity in there. I reached my arm inside. I felt something. I grasped it and pulled it into the light, and gasped. It was a necklace of the purest gold.

I guess I must have shouted, because a moment later, there were all beside me, hands busily pulling at the stones.

They fell away quickly now. And then, without warning—we'd found it.

Five huge, bracebound chests lay in a huge depression in the rock. Pull as we would, Tasker and I could hardly budge them. But finally, using rocks as prys and levers, with all four of us working together, the girls holding the pry while Tasker and I heaved, we managed to work one of them up into the cave. The lock was old and rusted. I didn't waste time with it. I pulled my pistol and fired. The old lock fell away. We pulled back the lid—and our last inhibitions disappeared, as a cascade of gold—coins, bracelets, necklaces, rings and nuggets flowed out onto the ground.

The girls screamed with delight, grabbing up handfuls of the gold. Tasker was stuffing coins into his pocket as if they'd disappear. I was looking on, stunned, trying to estimate mentally the value of what we'd found.

A shadow fell over the room. I looked up, and shouted in horror.

The entire Indian village seemed to be trying to come through the cave door. But there was no friendliness now. Armed with bows, spears, and a few, old rusty guns, they were bent on our murder.

At my shout, one of the braves fired his bow. An arrow sang across the room and caught Tasker in the side. He howled with the pain of it.

I still had my pistol in my hand. I hadn't put it back in the holster after shooting off the lock. Whirling, I fired, hardly aiming. One of the Indians dropped. I fired again and still again. I heard another gun go off. Myra, bless her, had found enough guts and brains to use her own pistol. The Indians retreated.

I moved up the slope after them, pushing new cartridges into the gun as I ran. I hoped to be able to scare the Indians far enough away, so that at least we might have a chance to get out of the cave. Anything was better than being trapped.

I could hear Tasker moaning inside. The firing stopped behind me. I gathered that the girls were trying to take care of him. I reached the cave door and peered out. I could see the Indians hovering among the bushes, some fifty or sixty feet away. I let off a shot.

I heard a light footstep behind me. I wondered which of the girls was coming to help. I turned to say a word of encouragement. I just saw the club as it swung down toward my head. My last thought before the blackness was to curse. Why hadn't I realized that there might be a second entrance.

THE FIRST sensation of consciousness was pain, as the sun-light seemed to sear my eyes. I opened them. I was bound tightly to a tree. Beside me, Myra, also tied up, was weeping softly. I couldn't see Tasker. But out in the middle of the village square, Patty, nude, was spreadeagled, her limbs stretched to their utmost, making movement impossible, was staring blankly up into the brilliant sun. Her eyes—I shivered at the sight, had been rudely stitched open. A gag of straw tightly bound across her mouth kept her from uttering a sound. And beside her, a vulture, a huge, evil thing strutted idly, every now and then grabbing down at her body and coming up with a mouthful of soft, firm flesh.

Around her, in a circle, sat the Indians. They squatted silently, each intent on the horrible drama before them, fascinated by the hell the girl was enduring.

The bird reached down and plucked at an eye. A huge shivering racked through the body. I turned my head. I couldn't watch.

How long did the terrible ordeal go on I don't know. Maybe an hour—maybe two. The bird wasn't in any hurry and neither were the Indians. But finally it was over. The girl was dead. And now not one, but a dozen vultures were there, plucking the last trace of flesh from the firm, young bones.

They cut us down then. Half a dozen Indians prodded us back to the same hut we'd been in the night before. Myra, her shoulders hunched, dry-eyed only because there were no more tears left, sank on the floor. It was a good hour before she told me what had happened.

Twenty braves had rushed them in the cave. They hadn't even had a chance to shout a warning. They'd dragged us back to the village, the girls bound, Tasker, still wild from his wound, and me unconscious. Tasker died before we got back. The Indians were sorry about that. They wanted all of us, alive. The brave who had shot Tasker was severely reprimanded. It seems he'd used a poisoned arrow.

The headman told the women what was in store. They were Mayas, still. They had been entrusted, they claimed, with all the ancient treasures of Mexico and they meant to preserve them. They were convinced that only through the old religion could they hope to succeed. So, we were to be sacrifices to the sun goddess, as were all who came to the village in search of treasure. Each day, at noon, one of us would be a victim. Patty, the youngest had been chosen to go first. Tomorrow—I checked the hut. It was solid.

There was no way out. And in front, a spear-carrying Indian sat motionless. No chance of getting by him.

The day passed. I was getting hungry and thirsty. But there was no sign of either food or drink. We'd have to exist—if we could—on our own inner strength. Night came. I didn't even try to sleep.

There was a rustle and a small hae behind us. I looked around. The hae came again—directly behind me—at the wall. I moved back there.

I tiamed in reply.

"Speak quietly, I beg you. This is Juan—your guide—remember."

"Yes Juan I hear you. Can you help us?"

"I'll help. See. At the ground, I am digging a tiny hole. Reach down. Here. A knife. Use it well. Be quick, if you can—and silent. If you get by the Indian at the door, come around the back. If you—and I are lucky—pray senor. I am no damnable heathen idol worshipper."

I felt the point of the blade as it slid through. After a moment, a slender, stiletto-like knife was in my hand. I whispered a "Thanks" and moved back inside. I shook Myra awake and whispered the story to her. I heard her praying, as I slipped as quietly as I could toward the doorway. I motioned Myra to call out.

"Please," she whimpered, pushing her head out the door, "I'm thirsty. Give me water."

The Indian guard turned, threateningly, motioning her to get back inside, moving toward her, spear raised, to enforce his order. He came closer—closer.

I lunged, knife low, arm sweeping up toward the gut. Coming from the deep shadow, he never even saw me, until the last instant, and then the blade was in his belly right up to the hilt, as my arm twisted back and forth. He fell grunting, as I pulled back my arm. A second slice across the throat, and he was dead.

Grabbing his spear, we dragged him inside, then Myra and I slipped out. There seemed to be no one about. A moment later, we were behind the hut, where Juan joined us.

"These damned savages," he was muttering, "they never even paid me for bringing you here. This will teach them." He saw us and smiled. "Come—come quickly. Follow me."

The jungle was only fifty yards away. Once there, we followed Juan, through the most twisted jungle trail. After a while, we stopped. I could hear water nearby. "Over there," he told us. "Drink—but quickly. Then come. We must put distance between the village before daylight. The Indies will not come in the dark. They are heathens and fear devils. But in the morning—God help us if they catch up with us."

Well, that's about it. A week of jungle travel and we were back in the first civilized point. From there, it was only a matter of time till the nightmare was over.

I married Myra. We live in Tampico now. She's still wealthy. But not what we might have been—id

How The Mob Keeps It's Vice Houses Filled With Fresh, Young Girls!

Lure them in with promises and then keep them there by threats of violence—that's the age-old formula for stocking fresh flesh!

by HARLAND E. FLOURIE

ADA MARTENSON IS a prostitute. About three months ago, following an arrest and conviction for "soliciting" she underwent a psychological examination under the sponsorship of the State. She wasn't the least bit bashful or backward in her answers. In reply to the question, "What got you started in this business," she laughed. It was a short, hard, humorless, almost sneering kind of laugh.

"What got me started?" she said. "Simple. A couple of guys beat the hell out of me. When I was lying on the ground, feeling as if every bone in my body was broken, they told me that it was only a sample of what I'd get if I didn't start hustling. So I started. That's all there was to it."

Unusual? Well, maybe a little. Oh there's nothing strange about the brutality of the boys who control the vice industry. When they have to get rough, they get damn rough. What was strange was the fact that up to the time of her beating, as far as could be determined, Ada had had no direct contact at all with the entire vice picture. Most of the girls who do get involved have been playing around the fringes of prostitution for some time and are fully aware of what is happening around them.

Now don't get me wrong. The vice industry is definitely not peopled with a huge mass of innocent maidens, held against their will by whip-slashing white slavers.

At least seven out of every ten girls entering the business of prostitution do so of their own will. For a few of these, the reasons are deeply buried in psychology. For most, the lure is laziness and easy money.

But the remaining three—that is 30% of all women involved, are not volunteer labor—at least not in the strictest sense. They are prostituting themselves because they have to, because they were forced to, by reason of fear, physical beating or out and out blackmail.

Patricia is a good example. Age 19. Occupation waitress. She'd been employed for some three months in a dive outside Chicago, that was a well known hangout for prostitutes. She admitted freely that she was perfectly aware of what was taking place.

THEY'LL TRY ANYTHING

Next time your pig bites somebody, watch it. He may go on trial!

by NAT McKELVEY

HANGING SHOULDN'T happen to a dog. Or a mule. Or even a pig. But it has.

At Falaise, France, in 1386, a sow ran amuck, biting a child about the face and arm. The child died. Aroused townsfolk captured the homicidal porker, dragged it to jail, and then to a trial court.

Defense counsel—oh, yes, the pig had a lawyer—argued brilliantly, but his case was weak. There were witnesses to the unprovoked attack on the child. The magistrates conferred, studied the evidence and found the pig guilty.

Solemnly, the black-robed justices read their verdict: "You shall be hanged by the neck until dead." But as a gesture to the Biblical "eye for an eye," they decreed the sow must first submit to maiming of the head and one foreleg. A professional executioner, imported from Paris, handled the details.

To indicate its responsibility, the executioner attired the sow in men's clothing. Before a hooting mob in the public square, the hangman hauled his grotesque prisoner. Carefully, the Parisian expert adjusted the noose. In a few minutes the sow had become pork, the sentence carried out.

Medieval records are replete with many accounts of sheriffs and jailers who had a hand in the rites of condemned animal criminals. Agents of the law required reimbursement for bringing justice to errant mammals—so much for board and room, so much for a hanging rope, so much for the professional headman.

The drain on the public treasury must have been large, for, during the Middle Ages, a steady stream of criminal animals filed relentlessly from jail to gibbet.

Even in the England of Queen Victoria's day, the Crown expropriated and hanged dogs tried and found guilty of killing a human being. In Switzerland, as recently as 1906, authorities haled into court a dog, charged with complicity in the murder of one Herr Marger. The unhappy man, according to the record had been set upon by two men and the dog. After the dog had killed the victim, the men robbed the corpse. Tried, the dog, as well as its masters, was pronounced guilty.

Strange as this may seem, it had its counterpart in twentieth-century Kentucky. There Old King, a foxhound, and his two puppies faced a in criminal court in Clark County. Accused of wantonly killing sheep, King heard a mountain of evidence against him. The jury found him guilty, and the judge pronounced the death sentence. Frantic representations by the dog's owner eventually moved the court to commute sentence to banishment from Kentucky for life. The pups, being minors, won acquittal.

No less authority than the Holy Bible fixes the liability of animals for criminal acts. A portion of the Book of Exodus declares:

"If an ox gore a man or a woman that they die: then the ox shall be surely stoned, and his flesh shall not be eaten; but the owner of the ox shall be quit.

"But if the ox were wont to push with his horn in time past, and it hath been testified to his owner, and he hath not kept him in, but that he hath killed a man or a woman; the ox shall be stoned, and his owner also shall be put to death."

Under different circumstances, the ox might be asked to pay a fine for his careless acts, for the Bible decrees:

"If the ox shall push a man-servant or a maid-servant; he shall give unto their master thirty shekels of silver, and the ox shall be stoned." On the matter of collecting this judgment against the ox, the Bible is silent.

KANSAS LEGISLATORS who passed a statute aimed at stallions and jacks must have been Bible students. The prairie pundits wrote a law declaring that "stallions and jacks shall be liable for damages if they escape from their owners." Like the Biblical sages, the Kansas folk, too, failed to suggest means for collecting.

To attorneys of medieval Europe, the Kansas law would have seemed entirely reasonable. Many a lawyer, during those times, acquired an enviable reputation for his knowledge of animal law and for his skill in exploiting it.

With complete gravity, these men defended, not only four-footed clients, but others including flies, worms, snails, locusts, weevils, doves and leeches.

Imagine a court room in the French hamlet of Mayence where a swarm of Spanish flies stood trial. As peasant witnesses complained, the flies were undeniably guilty of molesting livestock and destroying crops. The defense attorney, unable to secure acquittal, did the next best thing. He actually obtained for his clients, the flies, a tract of land on which they would serve their exile.

In the Swiss Tyrol, in 1519, other attorneys earnestly defended moles, charged with menacing the fields of poor farmers. The lawyer lost his case, but nonetheless, he wrote legal history. Not able to prevent a judgment of banishment against his clients, he managed a safe conduct of fourteen days for female moles that were pregnant!

Previously, at Basle, Switzerland, magistrates had sentenced a rooster to be burned at the stake for doing what no self-respecting rooster should ever do—laying an egg.

Not unknown to modern science, rooster eggs, in 1475 and thereabouts, scared the wits out of God-fearing folk. One of these rare eggs, according to belief, provided the most potent ingredient for which ointment. Hatched by a snake or by the sun, the rooster egg produced a cockatrice. This unlikely fowl could, by casting the "evil eye," cause a person to drop dead.

■ Is not surprising that a rooster who could produce such a monstrosity would be regarded with less than esteem.

The men who conducted animal trials were not devoid of a sense of justice, however warped. Though they might convict a pig of murder, they often remanded him to torture of the rack to see if they could extract a confession. If, under this rugged persuasion, the pig failed to confess, he won commutation of the death sentence to banishment. It sounds silly, but it had the practical advantage of saving some good eating for a future date, for no porker of record has ever said anything more rational than "oink."

PROBABLY THE MOST brilliant legal gymnastics on behalf of animals were performed at Autun, France, by Bartholomew Chassenee. His clients were rats, their crime the total destruction of the barley crop of the province.

Chassenee, with true legal acumen, searched the original indictment for errors. He declared (1) that the complaint failed to join all parties in that it did not cite all rats in every parish; and (2) that it failed to consider leniency for sick and aging rodents.

Having thus far blasted the prosecution's case, Chassenee proceeded to the coup de grace.

"My clients," he argued before the judges, "are entitled to safe conduct to court. I therefore ask your honors to demand bonds of all parish cats that they will agree not to molest any of the defendants!"

Surprisingly, the magistrates agreed. Town criers shouted the edict, notifying all felines to post immediate bond. The cats, entirely innocent of the vagaries of man, failed to comply. The court could do nothing but dismiss the case, which promptly became a sixteenth-century cause celebre. Overnight, Bartholomew Chassenee's animal practice swelled, and he became fabulously rich.

A chimpanzee who ran afoul of the law at South Bend, Indiana, could have used a Chassenee with profit. Part of an animal act, the chimp's most notable trick was smoking a cigarette which he did with the studied nonchalance of a debutante. Unfortunately, South Bend had an ordinance against smoking in public.

Apparently, the chimp could not read or understand English as well as he could smoke—nor had his trainer advised him of his legal liability. Hoosier cops arrested the monk, hauled him to court where a justice heard the case.

"Five dollars or five days," intoned the magistrate.

Even a four-footed felon can't win.

THE SCREAMING KILLER OF JERUSALEM

by HENRY W. MADISON

THERE WAS SOMETHING definitely wrong with the man who boarded the ship at the Bulgarian port of Varna in the summer of 1912. Of course, no one would comment on it. After all, he'd paid his passage and was entitled to all the service and all the condescension that went with it. But still, ■ didn't take long for anyone who chanced to meet him as he strolled about the deck to get the distinct impression that Boris Steglovich was peculiar.

It was his eyes that first struck awe in his fellow passengers. They seemed to burn with an inward fire that cut right into people's souls. His piercing stare seemed to belong to someone from another world, and he seemed peculiarly preoccupied, like a man in a dream.

And then there were his remarks. They didn't make sense. It was as if he were answering questions that had never been asked, questions that hadn't even been heard by anyone other than himself. It was disturbing. It was upsetting. It was frightening.

By the third day out, the other passengers had stopped talking to Boris entirely. But that didn't seem to bother him. He buried himself in his Bible, reading and reciting it aloud for hours on end. Those who passed by his steamer chair could hear him mumbling gutturally in Bulgarian.

"Just another religious fanatic," shrugged the Captain. "Lord knows, we've had enough of them in our time. Maybe he's a little stranger than most, but that's his affair, isn't it?" Of course, the Captain was an Englishman, and that breed is well-known for respecting privacy, even of the most outlandish sorts.

The sea voyage didn't seem to improve Boris's disposition. After they passed the Golden Horn of Constantinople (now Istanbul) he became, if anything, even gloomier and more intolerable. That he obviously hated the Turks could easily be understood. After all, the Bulgars of that period had ample reason for their intense feeling. But why did he have to take it out on ■ (Continued on page 36) a burden on their sons and grandsons, and a drain on the vitality of their nation.

ONCE, WHEN I WAS younger, I journeyed with my father into Africa on a venture of business. While there, I witnessed the ceremony in which the young son of a chief was inducted into manhood. There, before the tribe, gathered in open conclave, he was presented with twelve young girls. To demonstrate his right to manhood, he was required to possess each of these women in turn.

I stupidly asked the reason for this procedure. I was told, in words that I shall never forget. "The age of a man is marked by the number of his women. A new one is added each time the sun returns from the south. One who cannot possess these women can not possibly claim the strength to lead his tribe in battle. This is the mark of a warrior; this is the test of a chief."

Why is the name of Suleimon ibn Daoud known from one end of this earth to the other? Why is he revered in religion, celebrated in song and story

IT WAS ONLY A very few years ago that one of my grandsons attended one of your American colleges. I was extremely interested in getting from him as many details of your way of life as I possibly could. I instructed him to bring back to me as much written information as he could find. As an obedient boy, he did so.

Perhaps I have read your literature in the wrong spirit; perhaps I have not interpreted your great authors and philosophers correctly; perhaps I have made some fundamental error in translation—all this is possible. But, if I have read correctly, your entire civilization seems based on one, single principle—that each man shall take for himself only one, woman!

Of course, in the matter of wealth and power, your nation has achieved greatness. But you are sacrificing something far more important, to attain this status.

It appears to me that it is totally impossible for a normal man, in ordinary good health, to live a life of happiness, satisfaction, delight and comfort with only one woman. One woman is not enough for any man. I know. I have lived, may Allah be praised, for 80 happy years. I have sired many fine, strong sons. I have gained the respect of my friends and neighbors. I have achieved enough worldly goods to be able to give my family those comforts which the standards of modern civilization demand.

But I know too, that there is more to life than just working and striving for others. That is good, certainly. Yet, every man who serves the world and his family, deserves happiness and comfort in exchange. And there is only one way to gain such comfort—by possessing sufficient women to allow for complete daily enchantment; to permit eternal joy in the relaxation of one's private chambers; to allow enough change so that there will never be disillusionment.

Today, in my eightieth year, I have four wonderful wives and fourteen concubines. Without them, my life would be as barren as the desert. And lest you misunderstand, I add that these women of mine range in age from my first wife—the wife of my youth, who is 76, to my youngest concubine, a delicious morsel of 16.

Never once, from the day my father, may he rest in Allah's heaven, gave me my first dagger, to the day I wrote these words, 66 years later, have I ever once failed any of my women, at any time, in the privacy of my chamber, or in the public defense of their honor.

Strength comes to him who can use it. Allah has given the gift of virility to man. Only such a man who fails to use his gift to the fullest, will ever lose it. Monogamy is the curse of Shaitan. Men who follow that precept, wither, weaken and grow soft. They lie in their beds as invalids and depend on others to do their work and their duty. They are after so many thousands of years? Why is he looked upon as the wisest of wise men?

He had one thousand and one women. From consorting with them, he received the vigor, the strength and the healthful ways of life necessary to improve his mind, strengthen his physical power and sharpen the keenness of his political judgment.

You men in America, if I read your troubles truly, are constantly complaining of your failing, weakening sex powers. But you fail to see what is right before your eyes. This is a natural consequence of your one woman philosophy. Familiarity, as it is said, breeds contempt. When you look upon a single woman, day after day, night after night, eternity after eternity, is it any wonder that you become bored, uninterested and unfeeling?

Even a hour will pall, after a while, if one consorts with only that hour. You will grow to know every mark, every curve, of that woman as well as you know the disposition of your favorite camel. You know her words, her postures, her likes and dislikes; you know every facet of her bedroom behavior so completely, that even were you deaf and blind, you would still not miss a single word, a single overtone, a single smile, expression or movement.

If I had lived in that manner, with my first wife alone, by now I would long since have grown tired of women. I would have abandoned my activity and lapsed into a useless senescence, unrelieved by love, fiery passion, or demands for personal satisfaction. In short, I would have been like you, dead before I had even begun to live.

But with a new face each day, with a new challenge, a new shape of desire writhing before me at all times, my spirit is kept alert, my body has new and stronger reasons to respond with fevered heat to the charms I see before me. I never get bored with my women. I never tire of any of them, since I do not see any one, too many times in succession. The simplest arithmetic will tell you that I am with each woman only twice a month. Each time, it is like meeting a new bride.

It has been suggested (Continued on page 55)

IT'S PRETTY HARD to pinpoint the blame, but one thing is certain: it was a mess—the biggest, stickiest foul-up of World War I. Despite its uproariously funny aspect, it had its tragic side. A lot of good Joes were shot—many of them fatally. Although one takes it for granted that soldiers in battle will inevitably die, it's hardly pleasant to think that the killing was done by other American units. At that price, the "mistake" was hardly humorous.

The entire business is a perfect example of how the military mind can make hash out of the simplest thing. They can understand the "book," but once it goes beyond the pages of an army manual, it gets too complicated.

It was November, 1918 and the end of World War I was only a week away. The Germans were beaten and broken, scattering in every direction. The Allied Armies were advancing steadily, although there was still opposition. That's important. But enemy resistance was sporadic.

One bright morning, the French General Staff looked at the map and noticed that the American Armies were marching straight toward the ancient fortress city of Sedan.

That much was fine.

But in retrospect, Sedan had been the scene of France's greatest defeat, the humiliating rout of 1870, when Bismark's Prussian legions had destroyed the nation. The defeat left a legacy of bitterness and hate that has remained to this day.

Six months earlier, the situation wouldn't have disturbed a soul. There would only have been grim smiles of satisfaction that another (Continued on page 50)

NEW RACKET IN SMUGGLED

by RENE MOTARD

IN PARIS, three young girls are found murdered and mutilated in a deserted warehouse. London police raid a Soho apartment and arrest 26 teenagers who, the officers say, were engaged in a marathon sexual orgy that "defied all description." The youngsters were so crazed and frenzied that it was necessary to place them in strait-jackets.

In Munich, Germany several men are found dead—three of them in a single day. Post-mortem examinations show that they died from "over-exhaustion caused by drug-induced sexual excesses and exertions."

Such incidents have been reported all over Europe in recent months. They tell of sexually-inspired crimes and atrocities and monstrous orgies staged after the participants had used one or another of two new and terrible drugs.

The illicit dealers who have begun to traffic in these sex-excitants on the Continent have named them "Bulcan" and "Excitin." Both, investigation shows, originate in Dahomey, a former French colony sandwiched between Ghana and Nigeria on Africa's West Coast. Dahomey is now an independent Republic.

The drugs have long been known to—and used by—the gris-gris men, witch doctors who act as high priests of Dahomey's dark and bloody K'po leopard cult.

"Bulcan" is derived from the bepundo plant, "Excitin" is made from the roots of the takali plant—a low, flowering shrub. Both plants are unique to Dahomey and the narcotics manufactured from them by the gris-gris men have been used in "voodoo" rites for centuries.

These rites, which center around sex-and-blood-sacrifices to K'po, the leopard deity, have been described as "the most savage and violent of any rituals ever observed among African natives."

Entire villages and tribes participate in the orgies which begin with the ceremonial eating of one or another—but never both—of the drugs. Abandoned, mass carnality, climaxed by the ritual mutilation-murder of a couple engaged in passion is the order of a K'po ritual.

Although the exact form the rites take may vary, they always follow a hideous, bloody pattern of Saturnalia and violence.

Dr. Emile LeBlanc, chief of the French Medical Survey Department in Abomey, capital of Dahomey—is one of the world's outstanding authorities on the "Devil Drugs of Dahomey." He has long observed its use—and its hideous effects—on natives in the "back-country," and is one of the very few white men ever to do so.

"The two drugs look alike—both are fine powdered and snow white. They can be mistaken for face-powder or finely sifted flour," he declares. "Both are odorless and virtually tasteless, although what is called Bulcan—the narcotic made from the bepondo plant—is faintly sweetish."

According to Dr. LeBlanc and the medical authorities who have now studied the drugs' effects on white men, Bulcan induces an ecstatic "zombie"-like trance state in the user.

"Bulcan breaks down all conscious and sub-conscious moral inhibitions in the human mind," they explain. "The user is able to walk and to act, but his brain becomes a sort of monstrous cinema screen in which he 'sees' ghastly, perverted fantasies. If he—or she—is in the company of others, he wants to imitate and duplicate his fantasies. These generally encompass the most depraved and savage sexual aberrations..."

As for Excitin, Dr. LeBlanc identified it as an out-and-out aphrodisiac several years ago.

"It spurs the user to engage in incredible sexual excesses," he states. "Excitin has a dual effect. It not only acts as a sex-stimulant, but is also a physical stimulant—one that creates artificial energy, allowing—even forcing—a human being on to greater exertions even though the user's physical system is no longer equal to the demands."

Both drugs, Dr. LeBlanc and his colleagues agree, can—and often do—cause permanent insanity and death.

"Among white men, the mental and physical 'reactions' to the drugs' after-effects are almost always serious, often fatal," they declare.

Until about 18 months ago, neither of the narcotics was any problem outside Dahomey itself. Made by the witch- (Continued on page 60)

For Boris now took to buttonholing passengers, when they weren't quick enough to avoid him, and catechizing them in their faith. He held the steward, who unfortunately had to be polite to passengers, for more than two full hours, while he read him aloud the entire book of Revelations.

"I was scared," the steward afterwards reported to the captain. "It was the way he spoke . . . almost as if I were personally responsible for all the sin in the world. You'd have thought I was the anti-Christ, himself. At one point, I even thought he would knock me down."

The Captain, though he couldn't possibly accept a crewman's accusation—and only an impression at that—against a paying passenger, still was relieved when the ship finally pulled into Jaffa Harbor and Marie disembarked. So too, was everyone else.

"A most peculiar bird," was the general summary. "Well, he's our character who ought to find peace in the Holy Land. Nobody'll mind his Bible-quoting antics here."

Boris Haglovich, on the other hand, was totally oblivious to the impression he had made. His first sensation on landing, was one of glorious happiness and exhilaration. He was here, in the Holy Land at last! He was about to fulfill his life's ambition, to walk in the steps of his Saviour, to wash away his sins, and the sins of the entire world, in cool, running water.

Not too much is reported about the activities of Boris Steglovich during the next sixty or seventy days. We know that he made the normal penitent's tour of the holy area. His name is signed in the visitors' books of several of the most famous religious sites. Then we can follow him to Bethlehem, to Nazareth and finally to Jerusalem. And there, he finally re-emerges from his temporary obscurity.

In one way, the big earnings reported here might be called exceptional. In another way, there is nothing exceptional about them. That's because any man who will follow instructions and is willing to work in his own Duraclean business should be able to do as well under similar conditions.

Each of the men quoted here had talents and abilities different from those of all the rest. But each had one thing in common—a desire to win personal independence in a business of his own. And each man took five identical steps to reach his goal.

1. Each one read an announcement such as you are reading now. 2. He wrote for complete information. 3. He read the literature we sent him. 4. He gained new confidence in himself and the belief that he could succeed with Duraclean. 5. He accepted our offer to help him get started. Later, he wrote to tell us about his success.

In each case, remember, the first step was to write to Duraclean for information. If you would like to own a business of your own, why don't you do as these men did—right now.

When I hear from you, I will send you facts about the Duraclean Franchise that will open your eyes. You will see why a Franchise business such as ours makes success for the individual the rule rather than the exception.

The Duraclean home service business has been tried and tested. The market for Duraclean Service is tremendous—and growing. The methods that lead to success have been clearly charted. When an ambitious man follows these methods, success is the logical result.

Some Franchise businesses require investments as high as $50,000. With ours, you can get started for less than a $1,000 and we finance the balance. Monthly payments are so small that the profits on less than one day's service can cover your payment for the entire month. Even with this small investment and operating as a one man business, your potential is $250.00 a week net profit. With two men working for you 38 hours a week, you should gross a profit of $420.00. Allowing 20% for advertising and incidentals, the net would amount to $336.00.

The most important part of Duraclean home service is cleaning rugs, carpets and upholstered furniture by a revolutionary modern process known as the "Absorption Method." You do the work right in the customer's premises. No harsh scrubbing with motor-driven brushes. No soaking. Instead, an aerated foam loosens the dirt and holds it in suspension until removed. A test conducted by an impartial laboratory showed that the modern Absorption Method removed twice as much dirt as was removed by old fashioned machine scrubbing.

If you are tired of working for others or of jumping from one proposition to another—if you have a real yearning for independence in a business of your own—then send for "The Duraclean Route to Success." There is no obligation—no charge. No salesman will call to high pressure you. Send for the book now. Read it. Then if you want to take the next step toward independence, you can write to me and let me give you the same help I've given so many other successful men.

thousands to visit and to pray.

While many of these tourists were sincere, religious people of deep and lasting faith, quite a few surrendered to the weakness of the flesh. They came with good intentions, but a constant exposure to mental effort was too much for them. They became bored and looked for entertainment and excitement. The governors were only too delighted to serve them. So, over the years, a steady trickle of women, alcohol, narcotics and other outward signs of the tourist trade swelled and grew into a mighty stream. Jerusalem, if not a Sodom or Gomorrah, was definitely equipped to service the traffic in vice and venality.

The sight of all this sensuality may have been disturbing to many, but as a rule, people with strong religious convictions ignore it, while those whose fervor was somewhat less than intense, succumb to it.

That is, until Boris Steglovich arrived.

To Boris, the picture of the Holy City was like a hot flash of horror. It sickened him. It infuriated him. It drove him past the breaking point.

"It was an evil, disgusting sight," he reported later, "the lewd women walking the streets, their sensuous bodies vulgarly displayed in tight dresses, their leering, painted faces, their total lack of modesty and gruesome display of wanton lust. When they paraded past me, it was all I could do to restrain myself from attacking them with my fists. From the very beginning, I knew I had to destroy them. They had no right to walk in the same city where stood the Church of the Holy Sepulchre, the Mount of Olives and the Tomb of David."

But Boris was different from most of the others who were disgusted by the sight. He determined to do something about it. And, brought up in an atmosphere of revolution, weaned on stories of the 1878 Bulgarian revolution and the conspiracies and terror that preceded it, no step seemed too drastic.

It took several days to prepare, but that didn't disturb him. Once he had come to a decision, a strange calmness settled over him. A monk, whom he had met some weeks before, ran into him again during this interval and remarked on the change. "He was like a different man. He was so friendly, so good-natured and so talkative that I began to wonder if I'd misjudged him."

Finally, Boris was ready. He would wait no longer. On a dark, warm evening, he set about putting his plan into effect.

It was late as he moved carefully along a side street toward the heart of the old city. He was dressed, like an Arab, in an old turban and kaftan. He waited, in the shadows by the city wall, until the guard had passed, and then he hurried off, disappearing into the crowd, walking confidently, his hand resting on a knife concealed beneath the folds of his costume.

The city was relaxing to its evening's entertainment. Dirty-faced urchins ran shouting through the streets while robed men walked calmly along the cobblestones, ignoring them completely. In the coffee houses, sullen-faced Arabs crouched like crows on rush-bottomed chairs, smoking narghiles, while little boys with painted eyes brought them sweet cakes and coffee in tiny brass jugs. There was the constant tinkling of stringed instruments and the tap of drums, singing and laughing and muted wild screaming. There were few lights. And above all, the air was filled with the spicy smell of oil, olives, hides, perfume, tobacco and the sweat of hundreds of people.

Boris ignored it all. To him, the Arabs were hardly even there. They were just people—perhaps different from those he knew, but still they were ordinary folks, doing ordinary things. They were heathen, but at least they weren't disgusting, dirty and debauched.

He went on, till he reached a dark and narrow street, where he could wait, unobserved for opportunity. For he needed time. He couldn't strike this early in the evening. Yet, he didn't trust himself to mingle with the crowds along Ben Mahmoud Street.

Boris stayed where he was for nearly two hours. And all the time, his heart was pounding with excitement as he dwelt in his mind on all the details of what he was about to do.

Finally, he decided that the time was right. He made a last check, running his hands over the objects that were strapped about his body beneath his loose clothing. He reached his knife in his hand, and moved out.

BEN MAHMOUD STREET was the center of prostitution. As Boris reached it, his ears were immediately assailed by the screaming, laughing girls, shouting at the passers-by, calling out in detail the extent of their wares, and striking up a bargaining banter anytime anyone seemed interested. The street was swarming with them, as well as a horde of men, Arab and European alike, hurling insults at the girls sitting in the windows, or exchanging lewd remarks with them. In shrill voices, the girls answered in kind, promising every sort of debauchery if only the man would walk up and visit them.

Boris stopped beneath one house to watch the procedure. Now that he was there, ready to operate, he was trembling with excitement as his nostrils flared with anticipation.

He spotted one girl on the second floor of a small brothel. She was sitting in her window, but she was less vociferous than the rest. It was almost as if she regretted her choice of profession. Boris made his decision.

Without speaking, he waved. The girl's face immediately broke into a professional smile and she waved back. He nodded, indicating that he would visit her and she called down the number of her room.

Boris climbed the stairs slowly. The excitement was bubbling inside him so much that he was finding difficulty in breathing. When he finally reached the second landing, the girl was waiting for him. She held a flimsy wrap about her body, but it was so loose and so thin that it showed the shadowy valley of her breasts. She beckoned, and Boris followed her into her room.

Once inside, he looked around with an avid interest. The room was sparsely furnished, only a rickety wooden table and a low, straw-mattressed couch breaking the monotony of the bare floor. The girl stepped close and rubbed her body against him.

"You pay now?" she asked, her voice smiling, while her eyes fixed themselves on him greedily.

Boris pulled out some crumpled, dirty bills and handed them to her. She took them, happily, turned and deposited them in an old tin box on the table. Then, with a quick, deft movement, she slipped off the wrapper and stood naked before him.

"You like me?" she asked softly, turning this way and that, giving him a full and wantonly expressive view of her charms.

Boris began to sweat. She was lovely. "A young and fully developed beauty," he described her later, "with skin like milk and dark-tipped breasts that seemed to point at me like two strong magnets. When she ran her hands down over her stomach toward her thighs, the room went red before my eyes and I thought that I might die for want of her."

The girl moved toward the bed and motioned him to follow. Boris nervously licked his lips. For a second, he hesitated as he struggled with temptation. But then, with a tremendous effort of will, he gained control over his throbbing senses. He swore under his breath, and drawing his knife, he leaped at the girl, pinning her down across the bed under the weight of his heavy body.

He admitted later that he was strongly tempted to kill her there and then. "But I couldn't. She was so beautiful and so young. Besides

I needed her alive, for my plan. I had to have a witness, someone to testify that what happened was not an accident. Fear was my weapon. Fear would multiply my revenge into terror. And it worked out exactly as I had planned."

Boris held the knife against the girl's throat while he bound and gagged her. Then, getting up, he removed his kaffia. He heard the girl gurgle with fear as she saw what he was carrying.

For, wrapped about Boris's body with surgical adhesive tape, were six bottles of gasoline and a small clock bomb.

Carefully, and without the slightest show of emotion, Boris sprayed the walls, floor and furniture of the room with gasoline, dropped each bottle on the floor as he emptied it. Then he placed the bomb in the far corner and set the mechanism. "I figured five minutes," he explained, "to give me ample time to leave before the explosion."

PICKING UP THE GUN, he carried her to the doorway and waited. He couldn't afford to be too quick. He knew that this would be his only chance and he didn't want to ruin it with haste.

He stood there for 24 minutes. Then, backing through the door, he lit a match and tossed it against the gas-soaked wall. In seconds, the room was a blazing inferno.

Dragging the girl after him, he dashed madly down the stairs and into the street. In the doorway, he clubbed her and dashed for the shelter of another building nearby, as she fell.

As he reached it, the explosion rocked the street. The second story seemed to blow outward in one vast sheet of flame. Sparks were everywhere. The fire leaped across the narrow street and spread over the buildings there. The houses on either side lit the bombed block as were both burning fiercely.

Boris was thrown off his feet by the impact. He was bruised and stretched, but he hardly noticed it. He was grinning broadly, and every few seconds his mouth would open in guttural guffaws of insane glee. This was what he had been waiting for.

People were rushing from everywhere; from the houses; from the brothels; from the taverns; from the neighboring streets. But none of them were able to do a thing to cope with the blaze.

Boris watched a man bend down and pick up the unconscious prostitute. As the man carried the naked girl out of danger, he sighed with relief, and then, burning, he melted away into the darkness.

Boris Stoglovich might have gotten away with his artless, complete-

On December 1, 1912, just a little more than three weeks before Christmas, Boris Steglovich was taken before the headsman and decapitated. His head was placed upon the gate of Jaffa fortress. It was displayed there until nightfall. And all during the day, the prostitutes of Palestine came from miles around, from every city in the country, to pall the lifeless face with rotten fruit. Their eternal hatred was his only victory.

FORTUNE IN GOLD

to fear than I do from the jungle sons of the Mayans.

I suppose the treasure could be gotten out. A company of men to hold down the Indians—or slaughter them, while the treasure is lifted, might do the trick.

And as for any one else—why Mexico would never permit a couple hundred armed men to go parading freely through the countryside.

So there it sits . . . the treasure of Maximilian. And for all I care, there it can sit till hell freezes over.

I've had all I can take. Anybody else who wants it had better help themselves. But I warn you—go prepared. For the odds are a hundred to one that you're not going to come back. Good luck.

MOB KEEPS ITS VICE

"I'm no dope," she told an interviewer. "I've got eyes and ears, haven't I? And you'd have to be deaf and blind not to know what was going on. Why some nights, I've actually seen girls turning a trick right in one of the back booths."

She knew, but she did nothing to get out.

"Then one afternoon when I came to work," she continued, "the manager called me inside and told me I was going out on the floor to hustle that night. I told him I didn't want to. He slammed me a couple of times. No, you couldn't call it a real working over, though I've seen that kind of stuff. Just enough to show me he meant business. I wanted to run out of there, but he had this big character of his sitting at a table by the door. I knew I'd never get away unless I did as he told me. So," she shrugged eloquently, "I went to work."

"Why didn't you go to the police later on, when you got through?" she was asked.

"What was the use," she answered. "They kept me locked up in there for a week. And by that time—well, I couldn't have changed things, could I. After more than a hundred Johns, what was left for me. I knew the score."

Another girl tells this story.

"I was modeling in L.A. at the time. Things weren't so good. So I took a few jobs in a club studio. You know—where guys come to shoot nude models. Only most of them don't even have a camera. They walk around with their tongues hanging out, looking at the girls and they come and paw you over. They call it arranging poses, but who are they kidding with their little box cameras."

"One night after a session the boss showed me this photo. It was a composite. They'd combined my face with somebody else's body. The things that were going on in that photo? I've been hustling for ten years and I still can't believe it. It was a good job though. The studio man who made it was a real pro. They told me they'd send copies to my folks back home and to other people I knew.

"They told me that there were guys who came up who wanted to do more than look and touch. So, I began taking on an occasional job. It wasn't much at first, so I didn't really mind. But after maybe six months, the studio boss told me he'd sold my contract. I asked him what contract he just granted.

"There was another character in there with him, a tough looking ape. You're working for him now, the boss announced. And that was that. They put me to work in a ten dollar house and from there—well, there's not much of a story. Like I said, it's been a good ten years now."

There are hundreds of stories similar to these Variations? Sure. No two girls have exactly the same experience. Waitresses, models, singers, strippers, but actresses, maids or what have you. All of them have one thing in common. They get involved, just a little. And then, suddenly, without warning, they're in the game for keeps, all the way, without retreat.

A small "act" is booked out in the sticks. They run into "trouble" regularly. Cash seems to be getting low. Then the producer suggests that maybe if the girls are "nice to the manager" things might ease up. There's always some girl who falls for that one. And after a while, before she knows where she is, she finds herself being "nice" to a whole succession of men. Until she discovers that the "managers," booking agents, "finance guys" etc., are nothing more than Johns who have been paying for the privilege. But by then the girl is fully branded as a prostitute. There are all sorts of damning evidence to keep her in line. And another girl has joined the throng of the vice profession.

Another gimmick that's used, especially where inexperienced actresses are concerned, is a switch on the casting couch routine. If a girl won't lie down, why there's no job for her. If she does, she's told to come back the next day and pick up her part. But the next morning, when she appears, she's treated to an unexpected show. It seems that there was a hidden camera in Mr. Producer's office recording the entire scene—complete with dialogue. The overnight delay was to permit film processing. The girl is informed that that was her part. She is forthwith paid and told the movie is to be distributed nationally.

Before the shock has worn off, she is either conned or beaten into going to work as a full fledged prostitute.

titude often on the promise that if she works out the cost of the film they'll let her off the hook. Of course they don't. And anyway, by that time she's a confirmed vice cookie.

EVERY ONCE IN a while, the pugilist is expected to react as expected. And that's usually when the boys get mean.

Mary K., a singer in a small, southern club and roadhouse, refused to go along even after she was beaten. But that never discouraged the crew that was recruiting her.

"When they saw that I meant what I said and that they could have beaten me to death without my giving in, they changed tactics. They tied me down and had me gang raped. They kept me a prisoner for more than a month, tied up. They sold the rape privilege to anyone who'd pay—and brother there seemed to be no end to the guys who go for that sort of thing. And some got in some extra kicks of their own invention that I don't even want to remember. Finally, after forty-two days I broke down and agreed to hustle. Even then they didn't trust me. For the next few months I was put to work in a house where I was watched night and day. I guess they finally decided I was OK, because they transferred me to another place and there I could come and go as I pleased. By then, it didn't matter. Nothing mattered, really. After all that nobody living could care about anything anymore."

"At that, I wasn't as badly off as some other girls. One girl I met in the house, the one I was prisoner in, was a junkie. They'd made her one, keeping her locked up for two weeks giving her shots until she was hooked solid. She had to hustle to pay for the junk. At least I'm still human."

Here and there one runs across an occasional girl who is literally trapped into the business. These girls are not playing around the edges. Some of them have no idea at all of what's going on and would have run if they had known.

Penny T had the bad luck to pick a part-time hustler as a roommate. I guess she and the guy who was handling her decided that Penny was the kind of girl they were looking for.

One night they told her what they had decided. Penny was horrified. Her roommate just laughed at her, and told her that she'd better agree or they'd have her arrested.

When she refused to believe them, the roommate went down to the street and returned with a vice cop. The officer, a crooked devil and a thorough disgrace to his badge and uniform, was evidently working with the pair. He told Penny she was under arrest for prostitution, and promptly produced a five dollar bill.

BLACK DRAGON FIGHTING SOCIETY

The BLACK DRAGON FIGHTING SOCIETY is the WORLD'S DEADLIEST FIGHTING ORGANIZATION which has included in its closed membership the top fighting experts of the DREADED CHINESE TONG SOCIETY — the oriental and more vicious counterpart of the Mafia. Its members, who are the world's top Masters in the oriental filial and grappling arts, train in the most SECRET and FORBIDDEN aspects of the DEADLY Chinese fighting arts at GUNG FU, TAI CHI CHUAN, CHUAN-FA KEMPO, WING VI, PA KUA, SHAGUN BOXING and DIM MAK.

Until recently the forbidden training secrets of the society have been closely guarded by the members who were sworn to secrecy and joined together thru their initiation ceremony of blood. Breaking of the oath to secrecy meant death by torture to the offender.

Now for the first time their FORBIDDEN SECRETS OF TERROR can be shared with you.

BREAK A BRICK

Included in the manual is a GUARANTEED method of brick and board breaking enabling anyone to break a brick or board after only minutes of training. THIS IS NO EXAGGERATION! THERE IS NO TRICK OR GIMMICK. There is nothing to be held in the hand, or any hand brace needed; and no special stunt bricks or boards are needed. This is the same method that many famous Karate Masters use.

POISON HAND

Considered by many as evil and cruel; the lethally savage ripping, tearing, slashing, clawing and gouging techniques which comprise the POISON HAND ARSENAL are used to attack the strike, touch or pressure; the nerve centers, pressure points, major blood vessels and vital organs of the body. You will learn the original 77 "POISON HAND" techniques of ancient China in actual photographs showing them in application. These are not photos of drawings, but actual photos of COUNT DANTE applying these terrifying techniques which are meant to maim, disfigure, cripple or kill and have been used by oriental terrorists and assassins to MURDER!

OUR $10,000 GUARANTEE

We cannot guarantee to make you a Fighting Arts Master or even an expert as this is up to you, but we can make a $10,000 GUARANTEE that this book is DEADLIER than any other book, manual or course ever printed anywhere, at any cost and that it was as mentioned before refused for past publication due to its extremely FEROCIOUS nature. We also guarantee that the "WORLD'S DEADLIEST FIGHTING SECRETS" contains the most SECRET and FORBIDDEN attack and defense methods ever devised by man and that the DIM MAK and POISON HAND techniques are completely authentic and the WORLD'S DEADLIEST FIGHTING FORMS.

McARTHUR

French city was being liberated—that the Germans were being pushed out of France.

But this time it was different. The Germans were on their knees. Thus it became a matter of "national honor" for the French to avenge that rankling defeat of forty-eight years before. The glory of France demanded that French troops—not Americans—capture Sedan. That part was very, very bad!

What could they do about it? The Commander in Chief, Marshal Ferdinand Foch, was a Frenchman. He understood only too well the importance of morale to victory. But at the same time, he was a soldier. No commander in his right mind would stop a successful attack in mid-stream just to save wounded pride.

Nevertheless, he was persuaded to discuss the matter with the Americans. He found a sympathetic listener in the American commander, John "Black Jack" Pershing.

"Fine," said the tough old general. "If the French can take the city, they're welcome to it! I won't stop my boys, but I'm perfectly willing to have the French cross the American Army boundary, pass through our units and take over the drive. I'll issue the necessary orders."

At this point, it's well to stop a moment and look at the set-up.

To the west were the Frenchmen. Next to them bordering them in fact was the American 2nd (Indian Head) Division. To their right was the 42nd (Rainbow) Division the 77th (Statue of Liberty), the 1st (Red One) and the 89th.

The original idea of the Pershing command was to permit the French to cross in front of the 2nd Division and then into Sedan. The 2nd was the unit that was originally supposed to take the town.

That's all there was to it—just the one small change.

PERSHING CALLED General Liggett, CG of the First Army, to relay the news. "In the attack toward Sedan," said Black Jack "the French may cross your boundary. In this case the boundary may be ignored."

The fat was in the fire. Naturally for the "implementation" of the order, it passed through "channels." Of course with every channel the order grew more and more garbled and more senseless.

General Liggett roared for his Chief of Staff—enter General Hugh A. Drum. Liggett repeated the order from Pershing. "See that it's carried out."

Drum, with military precision, saluted, retired and proceeded to follow that good old army tradition of passing the buck. The receiver? First Army G-3 (Plans), Colonel George Catlett Marshall.

History does not disclose who actually wrote the order—but it's a cinch that the army being what it is, the job finally ended up in the hands of an obscure shavetail (with the actual order being cut and run off by an NCO). At any rate Marshall (and he deserves credit for it) took the rap, officially. The order, as he presented it to Drum for discipline, was addressed not only to I Corps and 2nd Division, but to V Corps, 1st and 8th Divisions as well. The order stated that Godan was the target city and ended with the phrase "Boundaries will not be considered binding."

Dream planned it, it signed it and that was that. For neither Drum, nor Marshall, nor anyone else from that moment on ever stopped to consider that Pershing had meant ARMY BOUNDARIES ONLY!

To the Commanding General of V Corps, General Sumnerall, the order meant only one thing. He had been assigned the mission of capturing Godan, and boundaries were not to be considered binding. The general's line of action, worst personally to the headquarters of the 1st Division and was badly ordered General Parker, commander of the 1st to take Sedan, take it fast, and everything else be damned!

There was only one way for the 1st to get there, to pass right across the front of the 77th and 42nd Divisions, block off the 2nd Division and then take the city!

The only command General Parker is reputed to have made is "I quote the big boys know what they're doing." And Parker was an experienced Combat Commander!

Meanwhile, back at the ranch, as they say, things were rapidly falling to pieces. The chain had been pulled and the water was rising - just the 42nd Division had not been let in on the big secret. Suddenly, out of the night, totally unknown units were appearing into the 42nd's positions. They ignored all challenges. When fired upon, they fired back. To General Menoher, the commander, and Brig Gen Douglas MacArthur, his Chief of Staff, a new, tough, major battle was shaping up. From where they sat, it looked like a brand new German attack.

While Menoher frantically called Corps and Army, MacArthur rushed back and forth to the front to the command of the 8th Brigade (his battle station). He arrived there just in time to get the message that the 10th Iowa Inf. was engaged in a fierce artillery and machine-gun duel with an unknown unit that had come up from nowhere to hit it on the flank.

Luckily for our side, which was just about to start battling itself to death, Menoher managed to reach MacArthur and tell him the story. In fact, the 42nd had just received word from the 1st that Big Red One was coming through!

To the frantic MacArthur, every thing was suddenly clear. Equally clear was his duty. A telephone message would probably become garbled.

So, throwing on an overcoat, a muffler and his famous sloppy hat, Douglas MacArthur, Brigadier General U.S. Army, ran out into the rainy night to personally supervise the fighting units. He was accompanied on his mission by Lt Col Walter S. Wells, Brigade Chief of Staff.

to keep Americans from slaughtering Americans. One at a time, he took command "by the hand" and led them against.

By dawn, exhausted, covered with mud, and angrier than he had ever been in his life, he started back to his command post. He had succeeded in the impossible. At least, he thought, not too many Americans had been killed.

But he was only one man. No matter how brave, how dedicated or how military he couldn't be everywhere at once. As far as his headquarters was concerned, MacArthur had been away too long.

Along the road, straight toward the 8th Brigade's command post, came a scouting patrol of 1st Division infantrymen. Their mission: to bring back prisoners.

On the main road, from the opposite direction, came a tall man in a fur-collared coat and a plain uniform. He wore a muffler around his neck and a sloppy, floppy hat. (This was before the man of the Air Force made this hat style popular). He was covered from head to foot with mud, and in his state of over-exhaustion he looked more like a refugee from a defeated army than an American brigade commander.

The daylight dropped out of sight, into the darkness. One of them brought his rifle barrel into position, squinted through his sights, and aimed in on the approaching figure.

"Hrrp, should I shoot him off?" He squinted nervously. "There may be a lot of other headshots around."

"Hold it," ordered the sergeant. "We'll take him prisoner. He may be able to tell us a lot. We're supposed to bring back prisoners." "I'll take a look at it if he knows where he's at," commented another sergeant. "Let's shoot the bastard and go back for some more. Look at that hat! That's a headshot for you!"

"We'll take him in," the sergeant repeated firmly. "That's an order!"

MacArthur, himself unaware of what was transpiring, plodded on toward his command post, now only yards away. He was thinking, most probably, of a hot cup of coffee with a nap, dry clothes, and possibly a bit of sleep. He was nervous. The gap between himself and the 1st Division was closing. He moved up to them, almost at once.

Two bunches of wild Americans had run up like wildcats from the roadside bushes and buried themselves on MacArthur's back. Down went the general. Down went the soldiers. When they finished rolling around, there was Douglas MacArthur, lying on the ground with half a dozen rifles pointing straight at him.

He started to squint in rage. "Quiet, headshots! Back, or I'll hit you this point on your thick skull!" The threat was quite specific - there was no possibility of misinterpreting the grin thrust in the doughboy's eyes and face.

"What do you mean, thank you?" "Doing," shouted MacArthur. "Have you gone mad? I'm General MacArthur of the Rainbow Division!"

"Buy you are," yelled one of the doughboys, "and I'm the Green Prince!"

"You men had better stop and think of what you're doing," yelled the general. "Take me to my headquarters."

ALL THROUGH THE NIGHT and the morning of November 8th, ignoring danger, shot, shell, ignorance, and misunderstanding, he labored to bring order out of chaos. Explaining the situation to each and every unit, he succeeded in supervising fighting units - sands of the desert. Each woman is like a jewel. And each has her perfections and her flaws. So, just as one selects an emerald to set off a pair of diamonds, or a pearl to complement a ruby that is how a wise man should pick and choose those earthbound houris whom Allah—may his name be everlastingly revered—has granted to us.

Variety is essential in all things, in height, in shape, in age, in knowledge of the arts of love, in complexion, and in disposition. A man must never forget that his moods are changing every hour.

Thus, for example, when I am tired, and my age seems to lie upon me like a burden, the sight of a young, lithe, sprite, curved like a million scimitars, dancing gaily before me, her body writhing with the contortions of youthful acrobatics, can send my blood boiling.

When I am rested, when I look upon the world with the keenness of vision and understanding of my years, I yearn for a cool, and comforting disposition that can blend itself to me in easy-going, mellow style.

When my bones are aching, I look forward to the heavy, soft and fleshy charms of a well-built woman, in whose arms I can find comfort and ease, as well as flaming passion.

These may seem like obvious prerequisites, but it takes thought and planning to achieve them. In this, as in so many other things, I followed the advice of my father. He told me at the beginning, when I first reached the stature and estate of manhood, that love is a matter of all the senses, of the brain as well as the body, of philosophy as well as instinct, of sight and sound, as well as touch and taste.

Love and its physical outlets are a matter of knowledge and learning, even more than they are of pleasant sensation. Any foolish youngster can achieve a modicum of satisfaction with any woman, whether she be the daughter of a sheikh, or a woman resident of a sordid house of joy. To him, it is all one. There is no meaning, only feeling.

What is the value of maturity if it depends for its happiness on the ways of youth. A man, to live fully, must gain and grow in all things. He must learn the perfection of love, even as he learns the joys of adult freedom.

In that way, he can prolong his activity far beyond the normal span allotted to the weaker, more thoughtless men.

I lived by that rule. When I married for the first time, I took not merely one, but two women to my heart. The first was a thing of beauty and delight. I loved her above myself, and I adore her still. The second, however, was an older woman, a widow, experienced in love and marriage, a woman who could give me more knowledge in one single week, than I could have discovered for myself in years.

The second, may Allah bless her soul, for she has departed this earth some twenty years ago this Fast of Ramadan, gave me more than love and knowledge. She gave me understanding of women and their kind. She showed me the value of a humble maid. For, by her grace and willingness, not only I, but my younger wife, became quickly adept at the art of love. We learned all that she knew, and we taught ourselves more.

AS FAR AS WE MASTERED our lessons, as fast as we reached the peak of our ability to move forward, I married other women, or took them to concubinage. In one instance, I even took into my house an old woman who was the mistress of an establishment of professional women. I let her act as teacher. When she was through, I believe that my harem knew more about their wifely duties, than any group of women, anywhere on earth.

Even today, it would take practically a lifetime to re-live the variety of joys, that are known to me and to my women. Is it any wonder, to view all this, that I find each new day a challenge and an adventure?

Having selected a harem, it is important next, to manage it correctly. Far too many men think that a collection of women will manage themselves. This is a prescription for a hell on earth. Women are no more capable of running a home, of thinking and planning for their own or their husband's happiness, than is a camel capable of herding sheep.

Women, left to their own devices will do nothing but eat and grow fat, demand comforts and personal decorations, gossip, argue and bicker all day and all night. I could think of no greater curse to place on my most hated enemy, than to wish him a life in the midst of an unmanaged harem. He would go mad.

Women must be kept busy with pre-assigned tasks, much like a company of housemen. Some must see to the cleanliness of the compound. Others must arrange for meals; still others must prepare and mend the clothing; some must care for the younger children; and always, a few must be resting and studying for the regular appearance in the master's chamber.

She, who has been commanded to silence the lord and master of the household, must think of nothing else for a full day before such an appearance. She must have time to think out his every need and desire; she must be free to consult with the other women for the latest thoughts and forms of pleasure; she must study and learn the tricks and nuances of the great lovers of the past; and she must be able to observe her male at all times, so that she may judge his mood exactly.

To take a woman straight from the midst of her household chores and expect her to change, like a magician's assistant directly from drudge to lover, is to ask the impossible. Such a woman is neither prepared for her role, nor is she able to give her entire being over to thoughts of total pleasure.

To accomplish this, one woman, the wisest and ablest of all, must be set above the others as an absolute queen. It is not love that should dictate the choice of the mistress of the harem, but discretion. Love is for the boudoir, common sense and discipline is needed for the management of a house.

The harem queen must be supported in every decision. But still, she must be as a slave to her lord and master, knowing that his will, his choice among the women of his household, is to be prepared like an angel when his desire calls.

If the harem is well run, the man of the house need concern himself not at all with domestic arrangements. His days are free for business and his nights are free for love. He has but to think, and his very thoughts will be instantly obeyed.

IF A MAN CARRIES out these rules, from his first flush of youth, until the last years of his life, he need never fear sexual debility. There is no trouble that can disturb him.

Many of my friends have enjoyed the ecstasies of physical love right up to their last days on this earth. It is not unusual. Most of my friends live in this manner, and so too have the friends of my father, and of his father before him.

It is worry, soft life, poor food, a lack of sunlight, and a leaning toward monogamy that are at the root of all the troubles of mankind. The day that women were admitted to equality among the races of the western world, on that very day did the decline in masculine vigor begin. A man is born to be the ruler of his household. Once he abdicates that stature, even to the very slightest degree, his virility will begin to diminish.

I owe everything I am to my harem, and to my way of life. I do not make any pretense of telling you, the rich, wise and powerful citizens of America how to conduct yourselves. But I do know that I would not follow the codes of your civilization, myself.

I am eighty years old. I have a harem. Ask my women which they prefer. Let that be your answer. I am certain that none of them would exchange me, even at my age, for the strongest, youngest and richest man among you.

That is my way of life. So be it. May the face of Allah, the compassionate and all-knowing, smile upon you and your children, and give you peace.

Have you ever wished you could draw this well?

How do you know you couldn't?

If you like to draw, you've probably tried your hand more than once at sketching scenes like the one above. But, chances are, you've run into problems—like getting buildings to “recede” into the background, for example. Or making water glisten the way it should. And after trying unsuccessfully a number of times, you may have decided that you just “haven’t got it”—that you’d never make it as an artist.

That decision could be a serious mistake. For all you may need to get on the right track is some expert help... a few pencil touches, a few words of advice from a skilled art instructor who can tell you exactly what you're doing wrong, and show you exactly what you should do to correct it.

Famous artists want to help you

Now a group of famous artists want to bring you this kind of help, no matter where you live or what your schedule. They've developed a way to teach you right at home the secrets of drawing and painting with real professional skill.

Among the famous artists are Norman Rockwell, Dong Kingman, Bob Peak, Fred Ludkens and a number of others. They've long known that there are talented people everywhere who could become, and should become, artists—but who don't do so because they can't overcome the drawing “road-blocks” in their path. Some of these people think it's a lack of talent that's holding them back. Others realize they have talent, but can't leave their homes or jobs to get the training they need to develop it.

A practical answer to this problem

To help such people, the famous artists formed the Famous Artists School. Taking time off from their own careers, they poured everything they knew about drawing and painting into a priceless series of home-study lessons. They illustrated the lessons with over 5,000 drawings. And they devised a method of constructive criticism that is almost as personal as private tutoring.

Each assignment you send to the Famous Artists School receives the individual attention of an instructor who is himself a working professional artist. He actually draws or paints his suggestions for improvement, and then writes you a friendly letter of specific advice and encouragement.

This method of personalized training has helped hundreds of people who were once awkward amateurs to become polished professional full-time and part-time artists.

They went from “dabblers” to successful professionals

Take Mrs. Nancy K. Houston, of Manchester, Ca., for example. A few years ago, she had absolutely no knowledge of how to develop my small latent talent. Today Mrs. Houston sells portraits to people as far away as New York, Texas and California. Anthony Fotia, of New York City, was a mail clerk, “stuck” in a low-pay routine job. Today, he's an artist for an important printing firm doing exciting creative work. And Mrs. R. G. Des Ernia, of Escondido, Calif., changed from a nameless faceless dabbler in art to a recognized professional. Now she averages $1,500 a year from all the part-time art work she has time for.

Find out if you, too,
have art talent.
Send for our free test

To help you find out whether you, too, have the talent to develop professional skill in art, the famous artists have created the fascinating Art Talent Test shown at right. It is offered free, and will be graded without charge by a member of the School's staff. (If you do well, or can offer other evidence of art talent, you may enroll for training. But there is no obligation to do so. For a free copy of the test, and a brochure describing the School, just fill out the coupon and mail it in an envelope today.

SMUGGLED LOVE POTIONS

doctoring gris-gris men who kept the method of manufacture a closely-guarded secret, the drugs were used only in K'po rituals. It is doubtful if either of the compounds were ever used outside Dahomey before 1958.

It was in the Spring of 1958 that Continental police officials first came into contact with two mysterious new drugs. They heard about them first from stool-pigeons who reported that there were powerful new aphrodisiacs and narcotics being peddled through underworld channels. Then, police began turning up murders and other violent crimes in which some "unknown" drugs had played a part.

Laboratory experiments isolated the drugs that were found in the organs of dead men and women. In May, 1958, samples were sent to Surete toxicologists in Paris and the drugs were identified.

French newspapers were quick to see political implications in the appearance of Dahomey-made Bulcan and Excitin on the European Continent. Journalists charged that the drugs were being distributed by Algerians to "undermine" the "moral and physical stamina of Frenchmen and Frenchwomen."

"Arab traders and smugglers, working closely with Algerian rebel organizations, are hoping to flood France with these hideous narcotics," the Paris journal Verite, claimed. "They are intent on making the drugs available to soldiers, sailors and armen."

There may be some truth in the charges, but it can't be the real reason why Bulcan and Excitin are pouring into Europe in ever greater quantities. The best guess is that production, smuggling and distribution are being carried out purely for profit—and the profit potentials are tremendous.

An ounce of pure, unadulterated Bulcan is enough to kill ten men—or to keep 50 human beings in a bizarre sex-trance for 12 hours!

An equal amount—one ounce—of uncut Excitin will provide "maximum aphrodisiacal effect" for a dozen human beings.

In Dahomey, a kilogram — 22 pounds—of Bulcan costs about $100. An effective "dose" of the drug sells for $10 on the retail market—which means that a pound of it brings
